Still $5 million left before 2021 deadline

BY MARTHA HOLMEN

SEVEN years after it first launched, the Our Faith Our Hope campaign is beginning to wind down. The last chance for parishes and individuals to apply for grants will be September 2021.

The diocesan fundraising campaign launched in 2010 with the goal of providing financial resources to renew, reimagine and revitalize the Church of tomorrow. Donors pledged about $41 million for mission and ministry both inside and outside the diocese. The first grant allocations were made in 2013, and since then, more than $9 million has been given to parishes and individuals across the diocese, in addition to the portion kept by parishes.

“I think it’s been very successful,” says Canon Paul Baston, chair of the allocations committee, which meets twice a year to review applications and approve grants. “The intent was from the beginning to reimagine church, to develop a new approach and find a way to continue the ministry and make it more attractive.”

There are five categories of grants that parishes and congregations can apply for: adaptive re-use of parish facilities; communicating in a wireless world; enabling parishes to become multi-staffed; leadership development; and pioneering ministry. Grant amounts have ranged from $1,400 toward the tuition for a professional development course to $418,000 for major renovations to a church building.

Canon Baston says he thinks the focus on these categories will have a lasting effect across the diocese. “Things like accessibility are improved – elevators and that sort of thing – and communications, definitely,” he says. “I think there’s more awareness of the use of communication within the worship service, but also beyond that, among people that aren’t attending church and among the parishes themselves.”

In addition to grants for parishes and individuals, the diocese has distributed $1.5 million so far from the campaign’s “Giving to Others” category. Three gifts of $500,000 each have been given to the Anglican Military Ordinariate to fund the office of the Bishop Ordinariate in perpetuity; to the Council of the North to support regional gatherings of clergy and lay leaders; and to the Primate’s World Relief and Development Fund to improve maternal, newborn and child health in Africa and Indigenous communities in Canada.

Though the end of the grants is in sight, there is about $5 million still available to be allocated. “I think all of the different sections have a lot of potential,” says Canon Baston. “I would encourage parishes to continue applying and looking at the guidelines to see if they fit.”

Grants are awarded twice a year, in the spring and fall. Each category has its own application guidelines and forms, and all applications need the support of the church’s area bishop. The next deadline is April 15. Applications will be assessed by the allocations committee in early May, and its recommendations will be forwarded to Diocesan Council for final approval.

Canon Baston says he is looking forward to continuing his work with the committee. “It’s been, for the whole committee I think, a wonderful experience to be involved with and have the opportunity to make some recommendations about where the money might go,” he says. “It’s been a lot of good, hard work by the talented and committed members of the committee. It’s been a delight to work with them.”

Composer influenced generations of musicians

By Stuart Mann

Giles Bryant remembers his first year as the choirmaster at St. Mary Magdalene, Toronto. It was 1966 and he was succeeding the great Healey Willan, a giant of the Canadian music scene who had died that year after leading the church’s music program for nearly half a century.

“They were huge shoes to fill and it was a strange experience,” he recalls fondly. “For a year it felt like I was merely somebody who was waving his arms in front of the choir while they were actually looking at a shadow behind me.”

Canon Bryant, who is retired after a long and distinguished music career of his own, will be one of many former friends, choristers and students of Dr. Willan returning to St. Mary Magdalene on Friday, Feb. 16 at 8 p.m. to commemorate the 50th anniversary — to the very day — of the composer’s death.

Everyone is invited to the concert, which will include performances by the choirs of St. Mary Magdalene and St. Thomas, Huron. His work at St. Mary Magdalene made it a North American mecca for choral and Anglican church musicians.

“With more than 800 compositions to his credit, Dr. Willan was called the Dean of Canadian composers. In addition to church music, he wrote operas, symphonies, chamber music, a concerto, and pieces for band, orchestra, organ, and piano. He was asked to compose an anthem for the Queen’s coronation in 1953, leading to the Queen Mother visiting St. Mary Magdalene in 1958. He was best known for his church music, which is still performed by choirs in Canada, the United States and the United Kingdom. In 1966, he became the first non-English church musician to receive an honorary Doctor of Music degree from the Archbishop of Canterbury. He was a Companion of the Order of Canada in 1967 and was one of the first Canadian musicians to appear on a Canadian postage stamp.

Originally from the U.K., Dr. Wil-lan was the organist and choirmaster at St. Paul, Blons Street before moving to St. Mary Magdalene in 1961, where he remained for the rest of his career. As a professor at the Royal Conservatory of Music, he influenced generations of Canadian musicians, singers and composers. "I grew up singing Willan and I’m a musician myself, so it’s always been a really special connection for me here," says Canon Harrison. "I regret that I never met him, but I’m always fascinated to talk to people who worked with him or met him."

He says Dr. Willan’s presence continues to grace St. Mary Magdalene. His music is performed regularly, and a small park beside the church is named after him. The parish honoured him during its 125th anniversary celebrations in 2013 by donating musical playground equipment for it. There is also a plaque of the composer in front of the church. "As a musician and priest, it’s wonderful to have someone with that historical significance," says Canon Harrison. "It’s part of the fabric of the place in a way that’s still alive and part of our liturgical life."

Canon Harrison is hoping the concert will help the neighbourhood community learn more about the famous musician. "We want to take the opportunity to invite people to know a little bit more about Willan — to say this is the person whose park you play in and walk by and cycle by, so come and learn more about him."

In addition to the Friday night concert, the church is planning to hold a reunion on Sunday, Feb. 18 for choristers who sang for Dr. Willan or his successors. Canon Bryant, for one, is looking forward to it. "I love getting back to that building," he says. "I conducted some former choristers there a few years ago and it was simply a wonderful experience. Many of us are still pals from 50 years ago and I’m looking forward to seeing them again."
Priests hope to restart chapter

Event brings Anglicans, Orthodox together

BY STUART MANN

An Anglican-Orthodox group that hasn’t been active since the 1960s is starting up again.

The Toronto chapter of the Fellowship of St. Alban and St. Sergius is starting up again.

The two men are hoping the Jan. 25 event will drum up interest in the chapter. “It has just been resurrected in name and idea up until now,” explains Fr. Ready. “This is the first event and we’ll see from that if people want to formally sign on.”

While membership is available in the worldwide fellowship, which anyone can join and comes with a subscription to the journal, there are no plans for the Toronto chapter to have formal membership and fees. Rather, Canon Hobson and Fr. Ready are hoping that members will stay in touch through email and a webpage and help out with attending speaking events and get-togethers from time to time.

Fr. Ready says the Anglican Communion and the Orthodox Church have had a close relationship over the centuries, and the Toronto chapter is a local expression of that friendship. (Similar to the Anglican Communion, the Orthodox Church is a worldwide confederation of 14 autonomous churches that grew out of Oxford, England in the late 19th century.) It publishes a journal, and local chapters meet to share papers, discuss issues of mutual concern and build rapport and relations between the two communions.

The Toronto chapter was active in the 1960s and 1970s and included such luminaries as the Rev. Canon Eugene Fairweather and Bishop Henry Hill before fading into obscurity. It has recently been revived by two Anglican and Orthodox priests – the Rev. Canon Philip Hobson, OGS, incumbent of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, Toronto and the Diocesan Ecumenical Officer, and the Very Rev. Fr. Geoffrey Ready, program co-director of the Orthodoxy School of Theology at Trinity College, Toronto.

The two men are hoping the Jan. 25 event will draw up interest in the chapter. “It has just been resurrected in name and idea up until now,” explains Fr. Ready. “This is the first event and we’ll see from that if people want to formally sign on.”

While membership is available in the worldwide fellowship, which anyone can join and comes with a subscription to the journal, there are no plans for the Toronto chapter to have formal membership and fees. Rather, Canon Hobson and Fr. Ready are hoping that members will stay in touch through email and a webpage and help out with attending speaking events and get-togethers from time to time.

Fr. Ready says the Anglican Communion and the Orthodox Church have had a close relationship over the centuries, and the Toronto chapter is a local expression of that friendship. (Similar to the Anglican Communion, the Orthodox Church is a worldwide confederation of 14 self-governing churches that are in communion with each other. There are about one million Orthodox Christians in Canada, mainly belonging to the Greek, Russian and Ukrainian traditions.)

“There is just a sincere interest in getting to know people within the local Toronto community who are either Anglican or Orthodox who want to get together and share fellowship and discuss issues of common concern,” says Fr. Ready, adding that several Orthodox congregations in Toronto started meeting in Anglican churches.

He says the Jan. 25 gathering is a good way to kick off the chapter’s new life. C.S. Lewis, who died in 1963, was an Anglican author much beloved by Orthodox Christians. “I often joke that he is the most quoted of the Church Fathers by Orthodox,” he says.

Even if the chapter isn’t at the top of everyone’s mind on Jan. 25, it will be a good opportunity for people from both churches to get together, he says. “It’s another opportunity to strengthen each other and to share. With the very complex world that we live in, it’s good to have friends, and it’s good to have the opportunity to explore each other’s traditions.”

The Jan. 25 event will be held during the Week of Prayer for Christian Unity, which will take place Jan. 18-25. The Week of Prayer for Christian Unity is an annual ecumenical celebration that invites Christians around the world to pray for the unity of all Christians, reflect on scripture together, participate in ecumenical services and share fellowship. The theme for 2018 comes from the Caribbean region: “Your right hand, O Lord, glorious in power” (Exodus 15:6). Resources for churches are available on the Week of Prayer website, including worship service templates, hymn suggestions, children’s resources, Bible study questions, bulletin inserts and poster templates. Meet Jesus in John’s gospel

When I was in seminary four decades ago, I spent part of Lent meditating on the life of Jesus. Over the period of those six weeks, I came to a new and deeper experience of Jesus, both as a real person, not just an ancient sage, and as the full son of God, not just a good man. That experience has shaped my prayer for over 40 years and has ordered my choices in life. I fell in love with the God who is revealed in the face of Jesus.

Br. Robert L’Esperance, SSJE, writes, “What attracts me to (the Gospel of) John’s Jesus is that he is an iconoclast who strikes at the very heart of those things we human beings want to cling to, yet which have absolutely nothing to do with Jesus and God. Jesus calls ‘Father.’ What does Jesus show us? Jesus shows us love.”

Even before 1995, the College of Bishops made a retreat of several days with the Brothers of the Society of St. John the Evangelist (SSJE) in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Some of you might know them as the Cowley Fathers, an Anglican monastic order founded over 150 years ago, who had a monastery in Brockton and were responsible for the mission to much of Muskoka.

When you read this, we will have just returned from Boston. One of the Brothers guides us in a daily meditation, with a feedback discussion later that day. We join the Brothers in their meals and their pattern of worship, with the Eucharist and short services (the Divine Office) marking the transitional moments of each day – dawn, noon, dusk and night. The retreat is a time of reflection, silence, reading, walking and yes, some laughter and play. It is not a holiday, but it is recreation in the fullest sense: recreation, renewing and rebuilding the flame of faith and hope in the midst of busy lives. It is a chance to come to terms with life as we are living it, and recalibrating those parts that need it. It is both personal and communal as we explore privately our own soul and grow in our understanding of each other. It is a good Lenten practice that I have valued enormously (even if it rarely takes place in the season of Lent!)

But it is upon us early this year – Feb. 14 is Ash Wednesday. I wonder whether the Ash Wednesday fast will win out over St. Valentine’s Day chocolate. (I am not taking any bets!)

The traditional disciplines of Lent are meant to prepare us not only for the celebration of Easter but for the ongoing life as a Christian disciple. They are:

- Self-examination
- Penitence
- Prayer
- Fasting and almsgiving
- Reading and meditating on the word of God

I want to commend to you one particular activity this Lent and ask that you join me in it. You can do it as an individual or, ideally, with a small group. The SSJE, in conjunction with Virginia Theological Seminary, have produced a Lenten program that we have chosen to use in the Diocese of Toronto this year. It is called “Meeting Jesus in the Gospel of John.” Over a period of five, six or seven weeks, the program “invites us not only to learn about God, but also to enter into a loving and intimate relationship with God, in which God abides in us and we abide in God.”

Each week, a different aspect of this gospel message is considered:

- God is love.
- The Word became flesh.
- Close to the Father’s heart.
- I have called you friends.
- Abide in me.
- We declare to you.

We are a lot of resources available to help: a daily prayer journal, a daily short video, suggestions for prayer, online posts and blogs, free resources for study groups and individuals. They are available for download from www.meetingjesusinjohn.org. There is even an outline for a parish quiet day. Something for everyone.

I invite you to join me in this journey to Easter through Lent and “reflect on the person of Jesus, his mission and his message, as it is presented in the writings of John.” Draw closer to God and grow as an instrument of God’s love in the world.

BISHOP’S OPINION

By Bishop Kevin Robertson

I have never too late to go back to school, as the three not-so-new suffragan bishops in our diocese know. Since our consecration as bishops just over a year ago, the three of us have been participating in a program run through The Episcopal Church called “Living Our Vows,” affectionately known as “Baby Bishops’ School.” There are 12 new bishops in our class – three from Canada and nine from the U.S. The purpose of the program is to equip new bishops to grow more fully into their episcopal ministries. The curriculum includes many practical things like Sunday visitations, speaking effectively to the media, overseeing clergy reviews, and even when to put on and take off our mitre! But the program also includes opportunities for reflection on living into the vows that were made on the day we were consecrated – hence the name: “Living Our Vows.”

What are those vows that guide our living? For bishops, they are the promises we made just before hands were laid on our heads. They include: being faithful in prayer and in the study of holy scripture; being proclaiming and interpreting the gospel of Christ; encouraging and supporting all baptized people in their growth in guarding the faith, unity and discipline of the Church, ordaining priests and deacons, sharing in the government of the whole Church; and showing compassion to the poor and strangers, and defending those who have no helper (BAS, p. 636-47).

As we live more fully into these vows, we are each assigned a coach, usually a more senior bishop, who is able to share wisdom and experience from his or her own years in episcopal ministry. I am blessed that Bishop Michael Bird, the retiring Bishop of Niagara, is my coach. I meet with him regularly, and he has been tremendously supportive in helping me navigate my first year of ministry in a pulpitar role. Another essential element of “Living Our Vows” is time away. Once a year, the new bishops gather together for four days of prayer, instruction, shared learning and fellowship. We meet at a retreat centre where there are relatively few distractions.

As we approach the beginning of Lent once again, what would it be like for all of us to recommit to “living our vows” in a similar way? As Lent is a season of education and formation for both baptism and confirmation, this is an ideal time to live more fully into the vows that we made (or that were made for us) at baptism. Here they are:

- Will you continue in the apostles’ teaching and fellowship, in the breaking of bread, and in the prayers?
- Will you persevere in resisting evil, and whenever you fall into sin, repent and return to the Lord?
- Will you proclaim by word and example the good news of God in Christ?
- Will you seek and serve Christ in all persons, loving your neighbour as yourself?
- Will you strive for justice and peace among all people, and respect the dignity of every human being?
- Will you strive to safeguard the integrity of God’s creation, and respect, sustain and renew the Earth? (BAS, p. 159.)

In seeking to live into these vows, here too I would recommend a coach. For those preparing for baptism or confirmation in the Easter season, your coach may be your parish priest or a leader in the parish who oversees catechesis and Christian formation. For the rest of us who are preparing to renew our baptismal promises at Easter, it may be a spiritual director, a fellow member of the parish, or a wise and trusted friend. You may also find it helpful to get away for a few days, or even for a few hours. Within our diocese, there are places apart, such as St. John’s Convent, the Holycross, the Holy Family, for prayer, spiritual direction, retreat and rest.

However we choose to enter into this holy season, may Lent be for all of us a liminal time of drawing nearer to God and “living our vows” more deeply.

Levee warms up chilly New Year

The annual Archbishop’s Levee was held at St. James Cathedral on Jan. 1, providing a touch of warmth during a cold snap at the beginning of the year. The event included a Eucharist, a ringing of the cathedral bells and an opportunity to share New Year’s greetings with the diocese’s bishops, chancellor, dean and their families. The receiving line was followed by festive music, a choral Evensong and the presentation of the Order of the Diocese of Toronto (see pages 6-7).

Ms. McDonald has been nominated by the Archdiocese for her outstanding community work and long-time service to the cathedral and the diocese. A retired high school principal recognized as one of Canada’s Outstanding Principals, her work in the area of housing has earned her the recognition of a non-profit housing complex in Pickering. Gordon Longman, ODT
St. Thomas, Brooklin
Mr. Longman has been nominated by the Archdiocese for his service as a long-time volunteer in his parish in a number of roles, though most prodigiously in the area of stewardship. He has been engaged in stewardship education for more than a decade, first as a member of the Stewardship Development Board and later as a stewardship education coach, working with parishes including St. Timothy, North Toronto, St. Matthew, Oradale and St. John, Whitby. He was instrumental in establishing the parish stewardship campaign and supporting the Our Faith-Our Hope campaign.

has volunteered as cemetery manager at St. James on-the-Lines, screening co-ordinator, server, chalice bearer, acolyte, envelope secretary and bookkeeper, and as a member of a parish selection commit- tee, Synod and the ACW.

Susan Schusche, ODT
St. John, East Orangeville
Ms. Schusche has been nominated by the Archbishop for her dedication to the life of her parish, the area of York-Simcoe and the diocese. She has faith- fully served St. John’s as a churchwarden (both rector’s and people’s), a Sunday school teacher, chair of the stewardship and fundraising committees and chair of the cemetery board. It was her election as the parish’s lay member of Synod that piqued her interest in the wider church, and in 2011 she was elected to represent the area on Diocesan Council. Ms. Schusche is a valued member of the York-Simcoe Area Council and is cur- rently a member of the Diocesan Council Nominating Committee.

Joyce Sowby, ODT
St. James Cathedral
Ms. Sowby has been nominated by the Archbishop for her extraordinary contri- butions to the Church, Trinity College, the University of Toronto and the prov- ince of Ontario. A member of St. James Cathedral for 80 years, she is a published author and has spent decades investing in and contributing to historical Cana- dian biographies and art collections, which she shares freely. Her kindness to immigrant families the cathedral has supported, as well as her decades-long service to the Cathedral York Group, personifies Christian charity in its truest form.

Stanley Squires, ODT
St. Saviour, Orono, Parish of Newcastle
Mr. Squires’ life of community mission has been influential to his small Anglican church in the village of Orono. He has chaired his parish’s Our Faith-Our Hope campaign, organized special dinners for the community to fundraise for various causes and worked to sponsor a Syrian refugee family, toward which more than 300 people in the area contributed. He lives the belief that the Church is not a building, but a mission “with the commu- nity and for the community.”

Carol Ann Trabert, ODT
Christ Church, Kettleby, Parish of Lloyd- town
Mrs. Trabert has been nominated for her many years of faithful service to Christ Church, the Parish of Lloydtown and King Township. Her work as church- warden at Christ Church and president of the King Township Foodbank displays the mercy of God. Her generous spirit, dedication to the gospel and compassion for those who suffer inspire others to do likewise.

Rebecca Wang, ODT
St. Margaret, New Toronto
Mrs. Wang has faithfully served her parish as organist and choirmaster since 1968. This year marks her 50th anniversary at St. Margaret’s. Sharing her considerable baking and cake-decorating skills and helping with events, she is a much-loved and respected member of the parish.

Dorothy Weir, ODT
St. Peter, Scarborough
Mrs. Weir has been nominated for her 62 years of service as a member of the altar guild. She has designed well over 800 floral arrangements that have beautified the church, giving joy and comfort to all. Along with her husband John, she was a founding member of St. Peter’s in 1955. Today, at 84, she continues to be a faithful Christian, setting a shining example of grace and humility for us all.

Patricia Weller, ODT
St. Peter, Cobourg
Mrs. Weller has been nominated by St. Peter, Cobourg for her commitment to helping others marginalized by life’s circumstances in what she would call a “sensible” way – by quietly and persis- tently bringing churches and community agencies together to help others through her parish and across the community. Additionally, as chair of the leadership development committee, she interviews parishioners, finds the right volunteer ministry for them and provides calm coaching to ensure their effectiveness. When things need fixing, “Call Pat Weller” is what works.

James Weller, ODT
St. Peter, Cobourg
Mr. Weller has provided 24 years of com- mitment to the production of Keynotes, a parish magazine of excellent quality. Through the pages of this five-times-a- year publication, he has built a spirit of community and provided inspiration to the ministries of his parish and beyond. As a creative member of the diocesan Communications Committee for well over a decade, he helped to form many com- munications initiatives across the diocese and share his valuable gifts more broadly.

Lance Wilson, ODT
St. John the Divine, Scarborough
Mr. Wilson has been nominated by the Archbishop for his service on the dioc- esan Reconfiguration Team, working with parishes to discern a way forward in times of transition and amalgamation. Serving on the board of administration at St. George on Yonge, Toronto, and as a Bishop’s Envoy in the York-Scarborough area, his community service and service to his parish are stellar. He is a leading lo- cal, provincial, national and international voice for racial justice and intercultural cooperation, and is currently engaged with diocesan Anglicans in fundraising for the people of the Diocese of North Eastern Caribbean and Aruba for hurri- cane relief efforts.
Grants help re-imagine Church

The diocese’s Our Faith-Our Hope campaign has provided $15.5 million in grants, in addition to the portion kept by the parishes. Here is how some of those grants have been spent.

Adaptive Re-Use of Parish Facilities

- St. Martin, Bay Ridges (Pickering): $12,750 to address accessibility concerns. The parish installed an exterior accessible door opener to allow easier access, created an accessible washroom and received estimated $5,000 to continue its accessibility work.
- St. Peter, Erin Mills: $75,000 to install a lift that is used daily to give worshippers and visitors access to all floors of the building.
- St. George, Leaside: $49,000 to hire a child and youth minister with a focus on LGBTQ youth.
- St. Mary Magdalene, Toronto: $75,000 to hire a part-time associate minister to nurture the spiritual lives of children and their parents.
- St. Paul, L’Amoreaux, Toronto: $100,000 to support the Companions on the Sainthood of St. John the Divine Ministry Centre. It also enhances the development of community support programs.

Leadership Development

- St. John, Ida: $2,500 for tuition fees to pursue a Missional Leadership certificate course.
- St. Mary Magdalene, Toronto: $75,000 to hire a part-time associate minister to nurture the spiritual lives of children and youth work. Under the leadership of the Rev. Jennifer Schick, the parish has found new ways to connect with its youngest members.

Pioneering Ministry

- St. Paul, L’Amoreaux, Toronto: $60,000 to create a chapel ministry at Silversprings Park, a large low-income rental complex located at Finch and Birchmount in Scarborough. The chapel offers weekly services, pastoral care, Christian study and service, and a satellite office for St. Paul’s L’Amoreaux Centre. It also enhances the development of community support programs.

Communicating in a Wireless World

- St. Bride, Clarkson: $15,000 for new audio equipment, projectors, screens and cameras. Prayers and hymns for worship services are projected rather than printed, video content is used during sermons, and the parish is finding new ways to engage through the use of visual media.
- St. Paul, Newmarket: $89,000 to renew its technology and develop a robust online presence, including a new website and branding.

Enabling Parishes to Become Multi-Staffed

- St. Olave, Swansea: $49,000 to hire a child and youth minister to nurture the spiritual lives of children and their parents. The parish has also held events outside of regular worship times to reach more families who aren’t able to attend on Sunday mornings.
- St. Cuthbert, Leaside: $4,000 to upgrade the church’s sound system to accommodate hearing devices. The project increased participation in worship by those with hearing impairments and created a more inclusive and welcoming atmosphere.
- Christ Memorial Church, Oshawa: $27,288 to enhance its technology for mission. The parish upgraded its technological equipment, developed a new website, started posting sermons online, created a Facebook page and improved its capacity for graphic design.
- Grace Church on-the-Hill, Toronto: $12,000 to develop a mobile app for Apple and Android phones to connect with the congregation and the wider community. It includes readings, daily prayer, videos and photos. "The Grace Church app has opened many new doors in the parish in connecting in a wireless world. We have spread the music of Grace Church well beyond our doors," said Chris Leonard, director of administration.

*The last chance for parishes and individuals to apply for Our Faith-Our Hope grants will be September 2019. Grants are awarded twice a year, in the spring and fall. Each category has its own application guidelines and forms, and all applications need the support of the church’s area bishop. The next deadline is April 15. The Rev. Augusto Nunez is the priest-in-charge of St. Saviour, Orono.

One of the highlights of my ministry came when I was appointed priest-in-charge at St. Saviour’s in Orono. Although I had held positions in ministry, this was my first time leading a group of parishioners. It has been a blessing integrating myself into the community of Orono through visitation, our outreach activities and fundraising events. St. Saviour’s participates in the Parish Missions, including outreach to the Indigenous community and, in 2017, to the migrant farm workers in the area.

My involvement with the ministry to migrant farm workers began three years ago at St. Paul, Beaverton. In 2017, the ministry was extended to the farms in and around Bowmanville and Orono. We introduced services for the workers every Sunday afternoon from the middle of July to the end of September. We alternated between St. John, Bowmanville and St. Saviour, Orono. Our collaboration with farm owners, social agencies and medical staff has enriched and developed our outreach to the workers. Many are extremely grateful for all that the Church does for them and for the spiritual support they have received. We are grateful to the diocese for its support and for the help of the Rev. Canon Christopher Greaves, the Rev. Canon Ted McCallum and the volunteers of both churches who are so willing to help.

My involvement in this work is a response to the call of God in my life. He has called me to serve in his Church, and therefore I find great fulfillment in preaching, teaching and serving others. I believe in the transformative power of God’s Spirit in our lives and with his love. I believe in the transformative power of God’s Spirit in our lives and with his love. I believe in the transformative power of God’s Spirit in our lives and with his love.

In retrospect, my training as a soccer coach, a community chaplain and my ability to communicate in English and Spanish have facilitated me to be able to serve in my current position. I believe this is amazing and sometimes unbelievable, and I can say with certainty that God uses the gifts that you have for his purposes as you put yourself in his hands. Of course, there are challenges and growing pains in ministry. For example, it was discouraging when we saw our numbers decrease for the services in Bowmanville in September, only to discover that during harvest the workers are busy and sometimes too tired to come to our services. Therefore, during these times, we proposed to go to them and hold the services on the farms.

The Rev. Augusto Nunez with Bishop Riscylla Shaw outside St. Saviour, Orono.

I was born in Peru, in a city called Callao, one of the largest port cities in the country. After my parents separated, my mom emigrated to Canada in the early ‘70s and sent for my two sisters and myself. We arrived in Toronto when I was in my preteen years. I was delighted to come to this new country with the new opportunities that it offered for my future, but it was not easy for me to witness the separation of my parents, be uprooted from family and friends and learn a second language. Before ordination, I spent some time in Johnstown, Pennsylvania working as a trainee counselor for Peniel, a residential Christian drug and alcohol rehabilitation program. Residents were taught Christian biblical principles to live by and healthy alternatives to combat the destructive habits of drug addiction. Many of the clients were from large cities - New York, Philadelphia and Washington - and the objective was to relocate them to a small rural town where they could focus on rehabilitation.

I was baptized in the Roman Catholic Church in Peru. My grandmother was a significant influence in my life. She took me to church when I was very young. These services made a big impression on me because I was introduced to a God that had shown his love for me by sending his Son to be my Saviour and Redeemer. In my teenage years, my faith in God became alive by the working of this Holy Spirit, and it was at this point that I decided to pursue theological studies. In my late twenties, I married my beautiful wife-quipu and started Bible College in Peterborough. We raised our four boys in Peterborough, and I finished my MDiv at Wycliffe College. Subsequently, I worked as a community chaplain but was drawn to parish ministry. With my Anglican training, and having a wife who was Anglican, I applied for ordination in the Anglican Church, and the rest is history.

Looking ahead, I hope to have the ministry to migrant workers more established and in other areas in the region. Furthermore, I intend to apply the knowledge I learned in a program to see how best to reach out to the unchurched, the broken and those who feel marginalized by society.

My favourite passage from scripture is John 3:16: “For God so loved the world that he gave his one and only Son, that whoever believes in him shall not perish but have eternal life.” God loves us and all his creation; I am humbled that he has chosen me to play a part in this great plan of salvation.

PARISH NEWS

Church brightens youth home’s Christmas

For several years, St. Barnabas, Chester in Toronto has supported the Kennedy House Youth Centre on Pape Avenue with a donation every month. In 2017, the church wanted to be more active in its support of the youth who make the centre their home. It donated school supplies in early September, and for Christmas, at the suggestion of a parishioner, it provided each youth with a Christmas stocking.

“We put out a box (in the church) for items such as scarves, hats, gloves, manicure sets, ear phones and personal toiletry items,” says the Rev. Jeannette Lewis, priest-in-charge. “The desk was overflowing with items as Advent went by. We also collected enough money to provide each youth with a $20 gift card to McDonalds.”

Ms. Lewis and some other clergy were having lunch in a local restaurant and discussing the initiative when the manager approached and asked if the restaurant could help out, to which Ms. Lewis said yes. “Together, we provided Christmas stockings for 43 youth on Christmas morning,” she says. “We also provided several hundred dollars for the centre to purchase anything needed for their celebrations.”

Michelle Cutts, the centre’s senior development officer, helped fill the stockings after the church’s midweek Eucharist on Dec. 21, and also delivered them. “The spirit of giving is alive and well at St. Barnabas, and we are already thinking about what we can do to show God’s love on Valentine’s Day,” says Ms. Lewis.

A holy moment on the way

God's love made visible during fleeting encounter on pilgrimage

BY THE REV. CANON DAVID HARRISON

It took 1,136,875 steps for me to walk the 800 kilometres of the Camino de Santiago through northern Spain last spring. And it meant carrying a single backpack containing my entire belongings for six and a half weeks away from home. But there were also (thank God) those “inward and spiritual graces” that gave my pilgrimage depth, breadth and life.

Fortunate to have the opportunity to take a sabbatical from my parish after seven years, and still working through what had been a challenging year, I walked. My spiritual director helped me understand the walk as sacramental in itself – an outward and visible walking from a familiar place to a new place and, what’s more, an inward and spiritual journey of rest and renewal (and, yes, endurance).

For me, sacraments are all about encountering. I encounter the living Christ in the ordinary things of life: bread, wine, water, oil and, yes, people – those ordinary things that become, through the grace of God, extraordinary. Out of this world, and yet still very much in it.

The medieval pilgrimage from near the French Spanish border in the Pyrenees to Santiago, where the remains of St. James are said to rest, has experienced a meteoric resurgence of interest in the past few decades. More than a quarter of a million pilgrims arrive each year in Santiago following one of several medieval routes. The journey needn’t be solitary – unless you choose to.

As I approached her, I was overwhelmed with a deep sense of love for her, an unexpected welling up of emotion that compelled me to tip my torn and cherished trekking hat to her. To my surprise she stopped, came to my side and spoke directly to me. Having failed in my ambition to learn some Spanish before I left, I understood not a word except “God bless you.”

“My God bless you” she said, and then continued her walk out of town.

I stood still for a while and watched as she walked away from me. Even in that instant I knew that this would be one of those profound and unexpected encounters that would animate my Camino pilgrimage. It was neither planned nor expected but was both outward and visible, inward and spiritual.

The word “sacrament” comes from the word “sacred” or “holy,” and this brief encounter was certainly that. But sacrament also means “mystery.” Not mystery in the sense of something to be solved, but rather something so luminous and profound that it cannot be fully contained with words nor dissected by analysis. By God’s grace, the water poured over our heads incorporates us into Jesus’ death and resurrection. The bread and wine placed upon the altar become his body and blood. Yet we remain a mystery to ourselves and to God.

New manager of major gifts, legacy giving

MICHAEL CASSABON is the new manager of major gifts and legacy giving for the Anglican Diocese of Toronto Foundation, which provides financial support for the diocese and its parishes.

Mr. Cassabon, who started on Sept. 5, sees his role as one of building relationships and getting people excited about the mission and ministry of the diocese. “The more enthusiastic we can all be, the more we can get engaged,” he says. “That doesn’t mean just giving money; that means engaging our whole selves, our time, our talent, our resources.”

Mr. Cassabon has a background in the Roman Catholic Church. As a parish priest for 10 years, he spent much of his ministry in South Carolina, where he helped his diocese open schools and churches to meet the needs of a growing Catholic population. He moved to Toronto in 2016 and worships at St. James Cathedral.

As he gets to know the diocese, Mr. Cassabon says he is looking forward to meeting local clergy and lay leaders. “We’re here to support what they’re doing and to help other parishes collaborate with one another,” he says. “We know that none of us are in this alone.”

Food truck serves hungry kids

SAINT JOHN - A three-way partnership between the Anglican and United churches and the Salvation Army is bringing food and winter clothing to hungry and cold children in the city.

Since last September, the Westside Anglican Mission, which already runs a cafe for the city’s homeless and had partnered with Saint John’s Carleton Kirk United Church and the local Salvation Army to hand out sandwiches from a Salvation Army disaster response truck. Every Wednesday evening, volunteers spend an hour and a half giving sandwiches, homemade cookies and hot dogs to hungry people in some of the city’s poorest neighbourhoods. About 90 per cent of the people who come for food are children, says volunteer Jeff Edison.

Many of those who come, says volunteer Judy MacGillivray, are not dressed for the weather. In the last month alone, they give away winter hats and mittens, and take requests for coats, all donated by the Salvation Army.

The idea for the ecumenical food truck arose last winter, says the Rev. Rob Sal- loon, pastor of the Westside Anglican Mis- sion, when his wife proposed handing out sandwiches as a way of reaching out to the community. Then, in June, he noticed the Salvation Army truck, and the idea of using it was born.

The food program costs about $70 per week, which is donated by members of the Westside Anglican Mission and Carleton Kirk United Church. The Salvation Army allows them to use the truck for free.

With almost a third of its children living in poverty, Saint John was recently named as having the highest child-poverty rate among major Canadian cities.

THE NEW BRUNSWICK ANGLICAN

Diocese moves toward balanced budget

QUEBEC - After years of struggling with high deficits, the Diocese of Quebec is looking at a “near-balanced budget” for 2018 as a result of recent cost-cutting measures, Bishop Bruce Myers says.

The diocese’s Executive Council passed the budget with a projected deficit of $10,000, said Bishop Myers – an expression of the diocese’s current resolve to live within its means after years in which deficits reached as high as $900,000.

The diocese was able to project such a small deficit by taking a number of measures, including delaying the date of the next Synod from this year to 2019. There will also be less money available to support mission and ministry projects.

The diocese is also slashing the membership of its synods, partly as a cost-saving measure. At its last meeting, in 2013, the Synod voted to reduce the size of future synods by roughly one-half. “Our experience as a church remain significant, but achieving budgetary equilibrium is an important step in addressing those challenges,” said Bishop Myers.

“Living within our means is a necessary aspect of good stewardship. In doing so, we also help maintain our long-term financial sustainability, so that we can continue to try and be the church God is calling us to be years more to come.”
