Three consecrated in Spirit-filled service

Archbishop acknowledges letter of objection from some clergy and laity

BY STUART MANN

THREE priests of the Diocese of Toronto – the Rev. Riscylla Shaw, the Rev. Canon Kevin Robertson and the Rev. Canon Jenny Andison – were consecrated bishops on Jan. 7 at St. Paul, Bloor Street in Toronto. About 800 people attended the two-and-half-hour service, which included the traditional laying-on-of-hands, readings from scripture in Plains Cree and Cantonese, and liturgical dancing.

“It’s a very humbling and deepening experience for me, and it feels like a new day for the church,” said Bishop Shaw afterwards. “I was overwhelmed at many points in the service with the gravity of what we were undertaking and with the love, encouragement and the feeling of the Holy Spirit that was in the church.”

Bishop Robertson shared his thoughts. “It’s a really wonderful day for me and for my family and for the church,” he said. He recalled the moment in the service when 20 bishops, both active and retired, laid their hands on his head for the apostolic succession. “It was a feeling of real weight – the weight of the office and the weight of responsibility, but I also felt incredibly supported.”

Bishop Andison said the experience was overwhelming. “I feel greatly supported by the prayers of people across the diocese and the country and around the world. It’s such a privilege to be part of the Toronto chapter of the worldwide family of Team Jesus, and to be part of that in a leadership capacity. I’m really excited about the future.”

Archbishop Colin Johnson, the Bishop of Toronto and Metropolitan of the Ecclesiastical Province of Ontario, began the service by acknowledging that the church stood on traditional territories of the Wendat, Anishinabek Nation, the Haudenosaunee Confederacy, the Mississaugas of the New Credit First Nations and the Metis Nation. “We recognize the enduring presence of Indigenous peoples on this land,” he said.

Standing on the chancel steps, Archbishop Johnson then read from a prepared statement. “As we gather in this sacred act to worship God – Father, Son and Holy Spirit – to confer Holy Orders, and to share in the holy meal, I want to acknowledge that I have received a formal letter of objection to these consecrations from some clergy and lay people of the diocese,” he said. “It contains arguments against the canonical and ecclesial validity of these consecrations. I have read and considered their arguments. I am grateful that they have chosen to make their objections known to me in this way with great dignity. I thank them that many of them have made the difficult decision to be here today – despite their serious reservations – because of the love and desire they bear for the unity and faithful witness of the Church to the Gospel of Jesus Christ. While it is our intention to proceed today, I also want all of you and the whole diocese to know that I am engaged in a serious and mutually committed consultation with those objecting, to find effective ways that our ministries might flourish together in the highest degree of communion possible.

“There are those present who come with joy, hope and celebration of this moment and those who are anxious, dismayed and hurting,” he continued. “This is Epiphany, and like the first Epiphany, people from all walks of life – friends and strangers, with differing experiences and competing expectations – have made a challenging journey to gather in this place today. All are welcome here, for we come at our Lord’s invitation as members together of Christ’s body, the Church, and as guests at the banquet that Christ himself hosts for us.”

The Rev. Chris Harper, the diocese’s Indigenous Native Priest, read the first reading (Isaiah 60:1-6) in Plains Cree, and Marilyn Yeung, ODT, of St. George on Yonge, Toronto, read the second reading (Ephesians 3:1-12) in Cantonese.

Bishop Peter Fenty, the area bishop of York-Simcoe, gave a powerful sermon based on Matthew 2:1-12, the arrival of the Magi and the Epiphany. “It’s God’s intention that the Church, the people of God, welcome all. My brothers and sisters, in this Church – the Body of Christ – there is room for every single person, of every race and creed. There is room for every person irrespective of their position in life, whether gay or straight, whether liberal or conservative, whether high church or low church, there is a place in God’s church for everyone. And that's worth saying thanks be to God."

After the sermon, the three bishops-elect stood in front of Archbishop Johnson to begin the consecration rite. They said and signed their declarations of faith. Then stating, in a reference to the letter of objection received, that "not all concur," Archbishop Johnson asked the congregation whether anyone further had any reason why the service should not proceed. There were no further objections.

For many people watching, the highlight of the consecration rite was when the 20 bishops in attendance gathered around each bishop-elect for the apostolic succession. Among them were Archbishop Fred Hiltz, the Primate of the Anglican Church of Canada, and Bishop Mark MacDonald, the Anglican Church's National Indigenous Bishop. Some retired bishops from the Diocese of Toronto also took part, including Archbishop Terence Finlay. All the dioceses in the Ecclesiastical Province of Ontario were represented.

Another poignant moment came as the newly consecrated bishops donned their vestments and waited to receive their pectoral cross, episcopal ring and Bible. The church fell silent and remained quiet as Archbishop Johnson placed mitres on their heads and presented them with their pastoral staffs. As they turned to face the congregation, he said, "I present Riscylla, Kevin and Jenny, bishops in the Church of God." The congregation broke into loud and sustained applause.

The new bishops together then said, "The peace of the Lord be always with you," and the congregation replied, "And also with you."

During the offertory hymn that followed, liturgical dancers carrying colourful banners performed at the front of the church. The offertory will support FaithWorks, the diocese's annual outreach appeal, which is celebrating its 20th anniversary.

After the service, many stopped to greet the new bishops and have their photos taken with them. There was much laughter and hugging.

People hug the new bishops after the consecration service.

"Today was a wonderful, Spirit-filled day," said Archbishop Johnson in an interview. "There were people here from all parts of the diocese. It was wonderful that people from a whole lot of different traditions and theological positions were able to come and be here, even if for some of them it was a struggle. I really appreciate the fact that we're continuing to work together to build up the body of Christ."

"I think there was a real spirit of waiting on God in this place," he said. "It was a very spiritual moment, and I'm sure that was true for those who found it painfully difficult as well as for those for whom it was a great celebration. The Spirit is there to

All of the new bishops said they couldn't wait to get started in their new ministry.

“I want to meet the people and get to know them,” said Bishop Shaw, who is the area bishop of Trent-Durham. “I want to find ways to see Jesus at work in the congregations, to visit the hospitals, chaplaincies, prison chaplaincy, streetwork in Peterborough, the outreach ministries for kids as they return the school – all these things and more. I want to see where Christ is at work in so many different ways in our diocese.”

Bishop Robertson said he is looking forward to visiting the parishes of York-Scarborough, where he is area bishop, and meeting the clergy and churchwardens. “Some of the retired bishops have warned me about pacing myself and making sure I don't try to be everywhere all at once, and I take that to heart, but I also have a pretty rigorous schedule over the next six months. I'm scheduled to be in a Bishop Anderson, who is the area bishop of York-Credit Valley, said, “There are a number of vacancies in York-Credit Valley and I'm looking forward to working with the lay leaders of those parishes to find the right leadership going forward. And obviously I'm looking forward to getting to know the clergy.”

Ordinary things in ordinary time

When I was in elementary school, I always hated the post-holiday writing assignment, “What I did on my (summer/Christmas/spring break/fill-in-the-blank) holidays.” I truly enjoyed the holidays – they were often high points of our family life – but they were over. Writing about them was not so interesting because I was ready to get on with the next thing. Holidays were a lot of extra work: planning and packing, getting food ready, searching out gifts, travelling and visiting – and of course, the inevitable cleaning up. It was actually nice to get back to routine, to the ordinary daily-ness of life.

Ordinary Time is the very utilitarian name the Church often uses for the “green” seasons of the liturgical calendar – the time of the church year outside of Advent and Christmas, Lent and Easter. It is the time we are now in. Over the course of the next few weeks before Lent begins, and then picking up after Pentecost in June until the end of November, we follow the Gospel of Matthew as he traces the life and ministry of Jesus as he moves from his baptism in the River Jordan to the events that lead up to his last weeks before his crucifixion and resurrection. It opens with the Feast of the Baptism of our Lord and closes with the Feast of Christ the King (or the Reign of Christ.) We tend to focus our special devotions and energy on the major festivals, but it is the incredibly rich “ordinary time” of Jesus’ public ministry that provides us with the breadth of his teaching and his compassionate actions that give vigour to our own daily life as followers of Jesus.

It is not in the Christmas hospitality or the Lenten discipline but through the daily routines of our lives that our faith is lived and flourishes or withers. Just as Jesus had to work out what it meant to be revealed as the Beloved Son at his baptism and through the temptations, and choose to live that vocation faithfully and fully in public, so we have to figure out how we will live our Christian faith in the everyday encounters with ourselves and others.

How do you respond to a hostile neighbour, a defiant teen, an indifferent co-worker, a generous mentor, a loving spouse, an ill child, a terrifying villain, a confused friend, a leader whose vision you do not share, a politician you did not vote for, a needy beggar? You fill in the blank. This is the list of the people you meet in your daily round of life. The baptismal vows we make (see p. 158 of the Book of Alternative Services) or the rule of life (on p. 555 of the Book of Common Prayer) give us a framework for making the small, everyday decisions that accumulate into a pattern of behaviour over a lifetime – not what is brought out, dusted off and polished up for the festivities, but the real, meaty, perhaps even often boring routines that announce who you really are and what you believe.

Fanfares are a feature of great occasions – the welcome of a Queen, the entrance of a bridal procession, the opening of a great performance. But one of my all-time favourites is by the American composer Aaron Copland: the powerful and majestic “Fanfare for the Common Man.” J.R.R. Tolkien, in The Lord of the Rings, wrote, “Some believe it is only great power that can hold evil in check, but that is not what I have found. It is the small everyday deeds of ordinary folk that keep the darkness at bay. Small acts of kindness and love.”

Queen Elizabeth echoed this in her Christmas message this year. “But to be inspirational, you don’t have to save lives or win medals,” she said. “I often draw strength from meeting ordinary people doing extraordinary things: volunteers, carers, community organizers and good neighbours; unsung heroes whose quiet dedication makes them special.”

“They are an inspiration to those who know them, and their lives frequently embody a truth expressed by Mother Teresa, from this year Saint Teresa of Calcutta. She once said: ‘Not all of us can do great things. But we can do small things with great love.’”

The recipients of the Order of the Diocese of Toronto exemplify that. They make an extraordinary witness to their faith in Jesus Christ and help to change our world for the better by the accumulation of small acts done with great love.

Window speaks a thousand words

God is good. In preparation for our ordination, we had the privilege of spending retreat time at the Community of the Transfiguration – the Episcopal convent in Dayton, Ohio. The hospitality was warm and generous from the Sisters and their rarely seen canine companions (I bonded with Winnie the Pooch). The rhythm of the days was made up of praying and eating together, with ample space and time for silent meditation, reflection and a brisk walk. There was also some excellent time for education and spiritual direction from our retreat leader, the inimitable Bishop Barbara Andrews of the Territory of the People, located in British Columbia.

The chapel at the convent is made of marble and beautifully carved wood. Every pew is unique, lovingly hand-carved by a Sister who worked to the Glory of God for five years to complete her vision.

When one looks upwards, the windows are particularly noteworthy, showing women and men of faith who have inspired this community, including Mother Harriet Monsell, John Mason Neale, St. Hilda of Whitby, St. Bride, St. Clare, whose window bids “Have no fear, little daughters – Trust in Jesus,” and a vividly colourful St. Francis window.

From the “Canticle of the Sun” by St. Francis of Assisi, this window caught my imagination in depicting the elements who praise God: Brother Fire, Mother Earth, Sister Water, Brother Sun, Sister Moon and Brother Wind. A little child in the bottom of the window gazes lovingly up to the Christ figure at the top. The light emanating from this Christ figure reveals that this is the Messiah: all creation is praising God.

This image speaks a thousand words: it

BISHOP'S OPINION

BY BISHOP RISCYLLA SHAW

calls, invites and beckons us to a theology of creation care, an entwined relationship with our environment in which we live and move and have our being. “We are one human family, one earth community, a common destiny for all,” says the United Nations Earth Charter.

Our well-being as sisters and brothers in Christ, as members of the human family, as sentient beings, is caught up with the well-being of the whole earth community: the little rabbit in the bottom corner of the window, the golden flowers in the Christ’s hands at the top of the window, the wind and waves. We are all connected and depend on each other. We are in communion with one another and with our Triune God. We are all related: a welcomed and familiar epiphany.

It is in the return of the light, as we move from the dark and hibernating days of winter into the new light and awakening as the days grow longer again, that we can see with fresh eyes our world around us.

As the light streamed through the jewel-toned window that day, it now streams into my mind’s eye. The light of the world is both a memory and a reality. It is said that St. Francis, near the end of his life, was blind when he dictated this canticle: he saw nature through the eyes of his mind. When we cannot see with our physical eyes, our epiphanies still awaken and enliven the eyes of our minds and hearts. The Light of the World shines loving kindness and mercy into our experience-darkened hearts and hurt-closed minds. We are on holy ground together. May this New Year be one of gentle enlightening and grace-filled new life.

First female archdeacon mourned 1

REGINA - The Rev. Betty Garrett, a Saskatchewan priest recognized as a trailblazer for female Anglican clergy in Canada, died Nov. 17 at a hospital in Moomsomin, Sask. She was 87.

"Betty Garrett will be remembered as one of the pioneering saints of the Diocese of Qu'Appelle," said Bishop Rob Hardwick at Archdeacon Garrett's funeral. "The way she patterned ministry has prepared the way for women in the church."

Archdeacon Garrett was ordained a deacon in 1975, then became the Diocese of Qu'Appelle's first female priest in 1979. In 1992, she became the first female archdeacon in Canada.

Archdeacon Garrett, born Betty Maud Hawkins, grew up on a small family farm in rural Saskatchewan and is said to have preached to her dolls and chickens as a child. She attended high school in Moose Jaw and Edmonton. In 1949, she began studies in theology at the Anglican Women's Training College in Toronto. She also studied at Wycliffe College in Toronto but was unable to earn a degree because she was a woman.

Archdeacon Garrett moved back to Saskatchewan, where she met and married Bob Garrett, a rancher and churchwarden. She was made an honorary fellow of Saskatoon's College of Emmanuel and St. Chad in 1993. She retired in 1994 but remained active in the church. Saskatchewan Anglican

Couple asks for prayers for son 2

FREDERICTON - A New Brunswick priest and his wife are asking for prayers after brain surgery on their three-year-old son this fall delivered mixed results. Surgeons operating on Colin Ranson on Nov. 18 at Texas Children's Hospital were unable to completely remove a tumor in his brain. However, he did seem to experience a lessening in the frequency of seizures associated with the tumour, according to his family. The family is now waiting to see whether Colin's seizures return, in which case he will need more surgery.

Colin had flown to Texas accompanied by his brother, his sister and his parents, Kimberly and the Rev. Paul Ranson, rector of St. John the Evangelist in Fredericton. The hospital is considered a centre of excellence in the treatment of Pallister-Hall Syndrome, a rare condition from which Colin suffers, which has led to the growth of the tumour and the seizures.

Colin had already undergone surgery for the tumour in March, when doctors succeeded in removing part of it. Both trips were funded partly by a gift of $170,000 from the diocese, the result of a fundraising campaign for Colin. The money helped with the cost of the surgery as well as accommodation, meals and time off work. The New Brunswick government also paid some medical costs. The Ransons are asking for continued prayers for Colin. The New Brunswick Anglican

PWRDF teams up for work in Pikangikum 3

TORONTO - Work to retrofit at least 20 more homes in the beleaguered Indigenous community of Pikangikum, Ont. is set to begin this spring, partly as a result of efforts by the Anglican Church of Canada's relief and development arm.

The Primate's World Relief and Development Fund (PWRDF) will be partnering with Habitat for Humanity Manitoba, a non-profit organization that provides homes for people who would be otherwise unable to afford them, to install water facilities and retrofit homes in the community. The work involves, among other things, installing water holding tanks, water heaters, pumps and fixtures for bathrooms and kitchen sinks. In addition, seven young people in the community will receive training in plumbing and electricity.

The work is the second phase of a project begun by PWRDF in 2012; the first saw 10 homes retrofitted with new water facilities and the training of six community members as full-time plumbers and electricians.

Pikangikum made national news headlines in 2008 after a series of youth suicides. Within two years, 16 people in the community between the ages of 10 and 19 committed suicide. In 2011, a group of volunteers was formed to provide help to the community, which also suffers from poor access to clean water. Most homes have had to rely on outdoor taps for water and outhouses instead of indoor toilets.

The federal government estimated it would cost $180,000 to supply each home with water, but the Anglican-supported Pikangikum First Nation Working Group has been able to retrofit homes at a cost of $20,000 each. PWRDF has raised $400,000 for this and other work in Pikangikum. The Messenger

Laity receive Order of the Diocese of Toronto

Award honours outstanding service over many years

The Order of the Diocese of Toronto, an award created in 2013, honours members of the laity in the diocese who have given outstanding service over a significant period of time in their volunteer ministry. We give thanks to God for the work and witness of these faithful people who, in the exercise of their baptismal ministry, have demonstrated that "their light shines, their works glorify." In 2016, those named to the order came from the following deaneries: Peterborough, Parkdale/West Toronto, York Mills and York Central. They were presented with their medallion at St. James Cathedral, Toronto, on Jan. 1.

Susan Abell, ODT St. Mark, Port Hope

Ms. Abell was nominated by Archbishop Johnson for her significant volunteer roles in the diocese since 2009. She is a churchwarden at St. Mark, Port Hope and still finds time to be active in her local community.

Governor General visits Ottawa cathedral for service, levee

ANGLICANS at Christ Church Cathedral in Ottawa rang in the New Year along with Gov. Gen. David Johnston and his wife, Sharon, at a noon Choral Eucharist Jan. 1. It was an unofficial visit for Mr. Johnston, an Anglican, who gave the first reading at the service and later visited informally with guests at the annual New Year's Day Levee in the new cathedral hall. Cathedral Dean Shane Parker and Diocese of Ottawa Bishop John Chapman greeted the couple on their arrival. Mr. Johnston then added his signature to a special guest book for dignitaries that was first signed by the Queen Mother and former governor general Vincent Massey during the royal visit to the cathedral in 1954.

Before the service began, Bishop Chapman delivered a pastoral address to the congregation in which he said the global community "is in crisis," with world leaders not behaving as they ought to. He called attention to "tens of thousands of Christians murdered, climate change, terrorism, war," and said, "We must not be spectators, commentators or passive critics of a time we wish was otherwise." Following the service, members of the cathedral choirs presented the governor general with the gift of a CD showcasing their musical talents. Guests at the levee said they were surprised but pleased that the governor general and his wife broke from their schedule to visit with them in the cathedral hall for almost an hour, chatting, shaking hands and posing for photos with children and adults alike. Other guests included Ottawa Mayor Jim Watson and Archbishop Luigi Bonazzi, the Pope's representative as Apostolic Nuncio in Canada. Accompanying the couple throughout the Johnstons' visit was an RCMP security team. Anglican Journal website

Pilgrims to follow in Jesus' footsteps

Trail takes hikers to Capernaum

BY STUART MANN

In the cold and dark of a Canadian winter, the thought of a four-day hike from Nazareth to the Sea of Galilee, stopping along the way at sun-drenched religious and historical sites, sounds like an idyllic daydream. But to a group of pilgrims in the diocese, that will soon become a reality.

As part of their 13-day pilgrimage to the Holy Land in May, some members of the group will hike the Jesus Trail, a 65-km route that winds through towns, villages and the countryside where Jesus walked and had his ministry.

Starting at the Basilica of the Annunciation in Nazareth, the group will hike about 15 km a day. They'll stop at the ruins of Sefphoris, the ancient town where Jesus and Joseph were thought to have worked in construction, Mt. Arbel with its commanding view of the surrounding countryside and the Sea of Galilee, and Capernaum, the centre of Jesus's ministry in Galilee.

The Rev. Canon Kim Beard, who is leading the trip, says many people seek out a "physical pilgrimage" as a way to simplify their lives and draw closer to God. "It's a very meaningful way to leave behind all of the technology and distractions – no cell phones, no computers," he says. "It allows you time to pray and think and reflect."

Canon Beard, the incumbent of St. Paul on-the-Hill in Pickering, is no stranger to pilgrimages. Over the past two decades, he has led seven pilgrimages and 20 mission trips in more than 20 countries. For the past two years he has led pilgrims on stages of the Camino de Santiago, the famous route across Europe that ends in Spain.

He says people who go on walking pilgrimages are often in a place of transition in their lives. They're heading into retirement or dealing with major changes like job loss, divorce or a medical issue. In some cases, they're in a "spiritual desert" and trying to reconnect with God.

Canon Beard says a walking pilgrimage can focus one's attention on what's really important. "I use it as an opportunity to pray," he says. "You can be silent and listen for God's voice without a whole lot of distractions. When you're walking in the rain or on an uphill stretch, you're very focussed in the moment – not on the future, as we often are, or caught in the past. It really does focus you in the present."

Sunset on the Sea of Galilee. At right, children make food at Nazareth Village, an open-air museum in Nazareth that reenacts village life in Galilee during the time of Jesus. PHOTOS BY THE REV. CANON KIM BEARD

He has applied learnings from his previous trips to the upcoming pilgrimage. At 13 days, it will be a bit longer than the usual trips to the Holy Land. It will include stops at all the important sites, but there will be lots of time for prayer, worship and silence. "It's designed to really give people time and space," he says.

To prepare for the trip, he is running a five-week course on the history and geography of the Holy Land and what it means to be a pilgrim. "You have to prepare yourself spiritually," he says. "You want to think about things like learning how to journal, being silent and deliberately eliminating things that might distract you. It's about learning to leave those things behind and simplifying your existence, opening yourself to God and creating a space for God's voice to speak to you. That's at the heart of the pilgrimage."

He says hiking the Jesus Trail will be ideal for that. "It will be a very different, slow experience – taking time to think about the places you're in and what they mean. We'll have devotions, worship and a scriptural theme for each day, so people can pray and think about where they are and what it means and where God is in their lives."

Those on the trip who do not want to hike the Jesus Trail will be able to visit nearby sites by bus. Before and after the Jesus Trail excursion, all the pilgrims will tour the Holy Land by bus, visiting important locations such as the Jordan River, Jerusalem, the Dead Sea, the Mount of the Beatitudes, Bethlehem and the Garden of Gethsemane. There will even be a night cruise on the Sea of Galilee.

Canon Beard says a pilgrimage to the Holy Land is not only an important way to draw closer to God but to learn about the Bible. "You will have the opportunity to be in places where Jesus ministered and walked. You'll have a new appreciation for the Bible. Many of the Bible passages will make eminent sense when you see the geography and the place."

He hopes to take about 20 pilgrims. Many have already signed up, but spots are still available. The trip will take place May 18-30. The cost is $4,419 for those who want to hike the Jesus Trail as part of the itinerary and $4,499 for those who do not. Prices are all-inclusive. To learn more, contact Canon Beard at 905-839-7909 by Feb. 28.

Canon Stackhouse renewed college

Theologian wrote books, served in parliament

The Rev. Canon Dr. Reginald Stackhouse

THE Rev. Canon Dr. Reginald Stackhouse, former principal of Wycliffe College, theologian, author and parliamentarian, died in Toronto on Dec. 14 at the age of 91.

"The spirit at Wycliffe today is a mix of both sadness and gratitude," said Bishop Stephen Andrews, Wycliffe's current principal, in a statement on the college's website on Dec. 14. "Sadness that we have lost the architect of the modern college and Wycliffe's most ardent supporter. And I am personally sad, as I have lost my former principal and a valued mentor. But we are grateful for his legacy which lives on, a legacy of a deep and reasoned faith anchored in the hope of the Risen One."

Born in Toronto, Canon Stackhouse was educated at the University of Toronto, Wycliffe College and Yale University. He was ordained a priest in 1950 and served at St. Matthew, Islington and then St. John, West Toronto before moving with his young family to Yale, where he earned his Ph.D. in historical theology. He returned to Toronto to pursue an academic career at Wycliffe, eventually becoming principal from 1975 to 1986. He continued teaching until 2014.

"Reg's ministry at Wycliffe was all about renewal," said Bishop Peter Mason, Wycliffe's seventh principal, in the college's statement. "Renewal of the faculty, of the board of trustees and of the bricks and mortar on Hoskin Avenue. Today, hundreds of former students, colleagues and friends give thanks to God whom Reg served so faithfully."

A devoted public servant, Canon Stackhouse served as trustee and vice-chairman of the Scarborough Board of Education, and founding chairman of Centennial College, Ontario's first community college. He served in the House of Commons from 1972-74 and from 1984-88.

A member of the Order of Ontario, he authored 10 books, including The God Nobody Knows,

The Way Forward: A History of Wycliffe College, Toronto, 1877 – 2002 and The Coming Age Revolution.

According to the college's statement, Canon Stackhouse was always concerned with the carrying of the Word into the world and would personally furnish Wycliffe graduates each year with a Bible to remind them of their vocation and charge. The Stackhouse Scholarship, which he began, provides bursary support for students called to ordained ministry.

Canon Stackhouse was predeceased by his wife of 60 years, Margaret. He is survived by his four children, nine grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. His funeral was held at Wycliffe College on Dec. 19.

Homeless deaths to be tracked

Toronto's top public health official says the city's new program to track all homeless deaths will provide invaluable data to better assist and house vulnerable populations. "The full scope of this problem has been unknown," said Dr. Barbara Yaffe, Toronto's Acting Medical Officer of Health, speaking at Holy Trinity, Trinity Square. "What we needed was information from the many health and social service agencies which work closely with individuals experiencing homelessness or who are marginally housed."

The initiative, which began Jan. 1, was officially launched on Jan. 10 with a press conference at the church, the site of the Toronto Homeless Memorial where an unofficial list is kept of more than 800 GTA homeless people who have died since the mid-1980s. The tracking system will collect information such as age, gender, unofficial cause of death and the location of the death, and whether the deceased is of Indigenous heritage, said Dr. Yaffe. The Toronto Star

Michelle Mercer is surrounded by Sunday School children during a presentation by Bishop Patrick Yu honouring her 50 years of service to St. John the Divine, Scarborough.

Sunday School teacher celebrates 50 years

St. John the Divine, Scarborough held a surprise celebration in October for Michelle Mercer, who has been teaching at the church's Sunday School for 50 years. Ms. Mercer started teaching when she was a teenager and has been the superintendent for several years. "Her positive attitude and creativity have made the church school fun for many children over the years," says Jean Stoner, a parishioner.

Several former students returned for the celebration. More than 140 people attended the service that day and the luncheon that followed. Ms. Mercer was presented with roses, a memory book and charms for her bracelet.

Later in the month, Bishop Patrick Yu visited the church for the last time as area bishop and presented Ms. Mercer with a certificate in appreciation of her dedication and service to the church, signed by Archbishop Colin Johnson.

Pergola honours retired organist

Elaine Pudwell, organist and choir director at Holy Trinity, Thornhill for 34 years, retired in June 2016. As a tribute to her ministry, the church's garden committee donated a pergola for the lawn.

Under Ms. Pudwell's leadership, worship hymns, chosen with care to fit the lectionary, ranged from traditional to contemporary to spirituals. Anthems ranged from Bach to jazz.

Many tributes were offered at her final service. "Her ability to keep her cool, to inspire the choir, to ensure harmony in the choir and to make our singing fun, enjoyable and an act of worship, were all touched on," said a chorister. "She expected the best and the choir tried to live up to her expectations."

A music teacher at Holy Trinity School in Richmond Hill for 22 years, she influenced many young people. "Elaine was a gift from God," said the school's chaplain. "She spoke her mind freely but was kind and considerate." She was able to keep the students interested with a blend of old Anglican hymns and upbeat religious songs.

In addition to playing at Holy Trinity, Thornhill, Ms. Pudwell appeared regularly as concert recitalist at St. Paul's Episcopal Cathedral in Buffalo, St. Paul, Bloor Street and Yorkminster Park Baptist Church in Toronto.

Pair travel to Grassy Narrows

This past summer, Coral Petzoldt and Maggie Panter from Holy Trinity, Trinity Square in Toronto travelled to Grassy Narrows, a First Nations community in northwest Ontario that had been devastated by mercury poisoning from a pulp and paper mill in the 1970s. Ms. Petzoldt and Ms. Panter were part of a Christian Peacemaker Teams delegation.

Before going to Grassy Narrows, they spent some time in Kenora, where they learned about Indigenous issues, including residential schools, sexual assault, children adopted into non-Indigenous families and murdered and missing Indigenous women. "We heard from more than one person that separation from family and community was the worst part of the residential schools, even worse than the various kinds of assaults," said Ms. Panter.

At Grassy Narrows, the team slept in sleeping bags on the floor at the Trappers Centre. They attended the opening of the Family Services Building. "After speeches, drumming and dancing, a delicious meal was served," said Ms. Panter. "We visited some of the memorials for the residential schools – some listing those who had died and others listing all those who had attended. We learned about the path that mercury had taken through the area and region. We went to the blockade site, started by two teens, to block the logging trucks from continuing to clear-cut, which also leads to more mercury poisoning. So far, it has been successful."

The group made bannock and learned how to harvest rice in the traditional way. "We attended a pow-wow and participated in the intertribal dancing. It was truly a memorable experience," said Ms. Panter.

Parish hall 'forest' helps needy

St. John, East Orangeville helped bring the community together to provide food and toys to needy families during Christmas. Local businesses, service clubs and emergency services were asked to decorate a Christmas tree and bring it to the parish hall to create a "Magical Christmas Forest." Members of the public were asked to visit the forest on Dec. 9-11 to place a new, unwrapped toy or food item under their favourite tree. While they were there, they could cast a ballot for their favourite tree, with the chance of winning it and having it delivered to their home.

"We've always had a tree in the hall for families to bring toys to, and we wondered how we could ramp up the display to encourage people to bring more toys," says the Rev. John Lockyer, incumbent. "It's a way of reaching out and expressing our support for the community."

The event was a success. Local groups decorated and delivered 14 Christmas trees, and more than 200 families visited to drop off toys and look around. "The event produced 12 giant bags of toys and three giant bags of food," says Mr. Lockyer. The toys and food were given to the Toys for Tots and foodbank, run every Christmas by the Orangeville Police Service.
